

Biography

Brent A. Blouch

Chief Commercial Officer

Brent Blouch joined Swagelok Company in 2007 and was named to his current role of chief commercial officer in 2022. In this role, Brent leads the sales support, marketing, and corporate engineering teams to develop cohesive plans, meet shared goals, and create even more value for customers.

During his Swagelok career, Brent has held a variety of leadership roles in planning, operations, and engineering within the organization's fitting services group. He was promoted to director of HR operations and then to director of the fitting services group before being appointed to vice president, global sourcing and logistics in 2016. In 2020, he was promoted to senior vice president, supply chain and customer solutions, with responsibility for supply chain planning, capacity and inventory management, customer and technical service, and global sourcing and logistics.

Outside of work, Brent enjoys spending time with his family. He is a proud Clevelander and enjoys serving on the board of two nonprofit organizations, whose missions are to support local residents and businesses. Towards Employment empowers individuals to gain and maintain employment, and Business Volunteers Unlimited engages businesses and nonprofits to work together to strengthen the community.

Brent holds a Bachelor of Science degree in manufacturing engineering from Miami University and an M.B.A. from Case Western Reserve University.
